Connect usb to android tv

People often “tether” their computers to their smartphones, sending their computer’s network traffic over the device’s cellular data connection. “Reverse tethering” is the opposite – tethering your Android smartphone or tablet to your PC to use your PC’s Internet connection. This method requires a rooted Android and a Windows PC, but it’s very easy to use. If your computer has Wi-Fi, it may be easier to create a Wi-Fi hotspot using a utility like Connectify instead. Prerequisites Before using this utility, you’ll have to enable USB debugging on your Android phone or tablet – open the Settings screen, tap Applications, tap Development, and tap the USB Debugging checkbox. You will probably also want to disable SuperUser access notifications, or you’ll constantly see the SuperUser notification. Launch the SuperUser app on your device, open its menu, tap Preferences, and uncheck the Notifications check box under Notifications. If you don’t see the SuperUser app on your Android, your device probably isn’t rooted. You’ll also need your device’s USB driver installed on your computer. You can get this from your device’s manufacturer or try downloading a generic driver from Google. Android Reverse Tethering Tool Android Reverse Tethering is a Windows utility that uses ADB – also known as Android Debug Bridge – to share your computer’s Internet connection with your Android over USB. It includes its own copy of ADB, so you don’t even need the Android SDK installed on your computer. You can download it from here – scroll down and click the latest ReverseTethering .zip file in the Attached Files section. Extract the downloaded .zip file and run the AndroidTool.exe application inside its folder. Connecting Plug your Android smartphone or tablet into your computer with its USB cable, select it from the Select a device drop-down box, and click the Connect button in the Android Reverse Tethering Tool application. It will connect to your Android and install the required software (Busybox and Redsocks) on it. Tap the Allow button in the SuperUser prompt to allow the USB Tunnel tool on your device. If you encounter a crash, close the Android Reverse Tethering Tool application and start again. You can also try clicking the Kill ADB button on the Tools tab to relaunch the ADB process. You’ll see a connection notification when the tool establishes a connection. Usage After the setup process is complete, you can open apps on your device and use the Internet. Your Android will forward network traffic over the USB cable to your computer, where it will take advantage of your computer’s Internet connection. The Windows application shows information about the forwarded connections. Some applications may complain that you don’t have an Internet connection, although most (with the notable exception of Google Play app downloads) will work properly. You can work around this problem by connecting to a 3G or Wi-Fi connection before activating reverse tethering – Android will think you have a normal connection, although all data will be send through your USB cable and not over the air. But, unfortunately, this tool will only work on Windows PC, which means if you have a Macbook. Then, you may have to ask your friend for his Windows laptop. This burning tool will update the Android TV boxes that have .img firmware based on Amlogic. However, on this page, you will learn how to download this burning tool for Android TV Box on your Windows PC. So, make sure to follow each step that we describe below. Now, without further ado, let's hover over to the guide. What is Amlogic USB Burning Tool? It is a small tool for Windows that is used to install and flash stock firmware on your smartphone or any devices that Amlogic Chipset powers. However, keep in mind that this tool is only supported for Amlogic powered devices, so it is better to use it with the same. Now, there are few prerequisites that you should follow while using this tool. So, let's take a look at that. Some Prerequisites: Check if your Android TV box is connected to your Windows PC or not. If not, then connect it. Make sure that your TV's power is on. Also, if you are trying to connect your TV with Macbook, then please use a Windows PC because this USB tool only supports Windows PC. Follow these easy steps in order to download and install the burning tool. Firstly, download the Amlogic USB tool file from its official website and extract it to the desktop Window. Then, double-click on the extracted folder and locate the InstallDriver.exe. Now, click on it. After that, it will automatically download and install the required drivers. Now, connect your TV to your PC and click on the Driver Installation wizard. After that, open the file named USB_Burning_Tool and click on the USB_Burning_Tool.exe to run the USB burning tool. Now, in the setup window, hit the yes button whenever it asks for confirmation. Then, change the language by click on the second option on the top bar of the window. Now, you require to put your device into recovery mode. So, check online how your Android TV box is put into recovery mode. Once you are entered into recovery mode, connect your device to your PC. Now, hit the File option and browse for the firmware .img file on your PC. Also, don't forget to uncheck the boxes. Then, tap the Start button to initiate the firmware installation process. Finally, now wait until the update process gets completed. Once it is done, hit the Stop button. So, that's it for this guide. We hope this guide helped you. But, if you still have any issues or getting stuck while flashing, let us know in the comment section. Our team will help you further. Watching videos on an Android phone or tablet is convenient when you are on the go, but when you get home why not put your big-screen TV to good use? Here's how to connect your phone screen wirelessly to your TV's screen. The exact terms used for Screen MIrroring and steps needed to activate may vary from those outlined below depending on phone, TV, or bridge device brand or model. Go to Settings on your phone, TV or bridge device (media streamer). In the following steps, the Android phone is on the left and the TV screen is on the right. Enable screen mirroring on the phone and TV. In the example shown the term used by the TV is Wi-Fi Direct. Search for the TV or bridge device. It may also be on a list of devices. In the TV screen mirroring menu select the Android phone or tablet. Initiate a connect procedure, after your Android phone or tablet and TV or bridge device find and recognize each other. The Android screen displays on the TV screen after the "connect" procedure is completed. Different devices use different visual motifs: After Screen Mirroring is activated, everything you see on your Android phone or tablet screen is shared on your TV or video projector screen. However, what you see mirrored on your TV screen is still displayed on the Android device. Roku If you turn your Android phone horizontally, for most apps, you should see the same view on your TV screen. In addition to content, in most cases, you will also mirror the onscreen menus and settings options provided on your Android phone or tablet on your TV. This means that you continue to use your phone to navigate through the phone's menu and apps. Convenience: Screen Mirroring provides an easy way to view your Android phone screen on a larger TV screen. No Network Required: Android video/image sharing is not affected by network traffic or network connectivity glitches as no connection through a router is needed.Device Availability: In addition to Android devices, screen mirroring reception is available on TVs and select video projectors, Blu-ray players, cable/satellite boxes, media streamers, laptops, and PCs.Business and Classroom Application: With an Android phone or tablet and a video projector with bridge device that support screen mirroring, you can wirelessly display a business or classroom presentation saved on your android device on a very large screen. You can't perform other tasks on your phone while content is mirrored. If you tap another icon or app, the content will cease playing and you will see the next function that is activated. Although you can screen mirror your phone to most smart TVs or using a screen-mirroring compatible bridge device that can be connected to any TV physically (preferably using HDMI), connection and setup are not guaranteed. You will have the best luck if the phone/tablet is the same brand as the TV or bridge device. Examples include Samsung Android phones with Samsung TVs/Blu-ray Disc players and Kindle Fire Tablets with Fire TV sticks/Fire Edition TVs. You can't mirror an Android phone or tablet to an Apple TV without installation of an additional app such as Airmore or Mirroring 360. Another way to view content from an Android device on TV is through Casting. Screen Mirroring and Casting are similar, but there are differences including: Casting requires the Android device and TV to be connected to the same Wi-Fi network.Casting works for photos, self-made videos, and select apps.While selected Cast content is playing on your TV, you can perform other tasks on your Android device at the same time or even turn it off. Your Android device may require an additional app and plugging in a Chromecast on your TV before Casting can be used. Some devices (Roku sticks/boxes/TVs, Samsung Smart TVs/Blu-ray players, and Fire TV Stick/Fire Edition TVs) allow casting of select apps from Android phones without the need for an additional app or Chromecast. One way to view an Android phone on a TV is through Screen Mirroring. Almost all Android phones offer this capability built-in, as well as most smart TVs, media streamers, and smart Blu-ray Disc players. Media streamers that support screen mirroring for Android include Roku, Amazon Fire TV, and Chromecast. Apple TV does not support screen mirroring for Android natively. Screen Mirroring displays everything on an Android screen (including email, streaming services, platforms such as KODI, photos, videos, and web pages) on your TV wirelessly (no network connection to a router required). There are two wireless connection paths to screen mirror an Android device on a TV: From an Android device directly to a TV. From an Android device wirelessly to a "bridge" device (such as a media streamer, smart Blu-ray player). The "bridge" routes the received mirrored content to a TV via an HDMI or other compatible connection. Screen Mirroring is usually referred to as Miracast, which is based on Wi-Fi Direct technology. Depending on the brand and model of Android phone, TV, or "bridge" device, Screen Mirroring may also be referred to as: Wireless DisplayDisplay MirroringHTC ConnectSmartShare (LG)SmartView (Samsung)AllShare (Samsung) FAQ How do I mirror from Android to Fire Stick? To cast to a Fire Stick from an Android phone, power on the Amazon Fire TV Stick, press Home on the remote, and select Mirroring. Next, on your Android, go to Settings > Connected Devices > Cast, and select your Fire TV Stick. How do I mirror from Android to Roku? To cast to Roku TV from an Android, open the streaming app you want to cast from on your Android phone, and select the cast icon in the corner of the screen. Select your Roku TV or Roku device to begin casting. How do I mirror from an Android phone to a TV without Wi-Fi? If you don't have a Wi-Fi connection, try using a direct USB-to-HDMI cable. Plug the USB end of the cable into your Android phone, and then plug the HDMI end into your smart TV's HDMI slot to begin mirroring your phone's contents. Thanks for letting us know!
